HENRY REED & CO.

The Democratic Nominations.

The result of the Convention at Baltimore establishes the irrepressible conflict in the Democratic party. Two sectional organizassumes an exclusive claim to to the term National. It is not probable that any permanent peace can be patched up between the factions; and, although there is a value in the good will and fixtures of the old party, consisting chiefly—when out of power—of the name, which will be held by some organization, yet it is not probable that the party will regain its former prestige until the politicians prominent in this conflict shall have killed off each other, and have been superseded by new elements and a complete re-

This dissolution of old political parties and organization of new has occurred several times in our political history, and it can not be said that the prosperity of the country has been in the least retarded thereby. To be sure, these healthy movements of the political system retire many politicians from nctive service and turn them into fossils, who thenceforth lament the decline of political virtue-which means the decline of appre ciation of their merits—and sigh for the golder days of the old Federal, or Republican, or Whig, or Democratic party, as the case may be; but the necessity for throwing this load of politicians off from the system is the cause of these political movements; it is a healthy, patural operation, and instead of causing any regret, is to be bailed as a symptom of recuperating energies.

The feud between the Hunker Barnburne Democrats of New York is probably a type of this conflict between the Northern and Southern Democrats, which, however, it may be healed on the surface, will have bitter wrongs to be avenged so long as any of the present leaders are prominent.

Neither is the loss of the mythical claim to nationality to be lamented. A nationality which, for years, has existed on a platform with a Northern and Southern face, and which consists of State-rights and disunion at the South, and in the North makes the Union a thing to be worshipped, and Northern State-rights, treason, is not consistent with the equality of the States, and the sooner it is disposed of, the better. We often hear that Democratic principles are eternal, and we are not aware that eternal principles depend on the latitude of the residence of their supporters.

So far as any question of principle or of opinion is represented in this division of the Democratic Party, it is a mere abstraction. The South demand a recognition of their right to Congressional protection of slave property in the Territories. Mr. Douglas is willing that they should have it, if the Supreme Court say that it is their right. By what the Court have said, it is known that they will declare that this is a Constitutional right. The Douglas men know this, but they think that to put it in the platform now, will prevent Douglas from carrying a Northern State; therefore, they insist on keeping it out. It is a more question of party expediency, and the negro fanaticism has been worked up to such a hight in the South, that they will not consent to adhere to the Democratic time-honored platform-du-

The secession movement is by no mean unanimous in the South. If Breckinridge accepts the nomination, it may carry some Southern States, and may be the means o giving others to the Bell ticket; but the measure of support which the Charleston secessionists received, is very far from promising a united South, and the probability is, that the Douglas voters will have a formidabie organization in nearly every Southern State.

naturally given great joy to the Repub licans; but the sober, second thought will show them they are not quite beyond the precinets of the forest. The Democratic split is in the South. We presume that the Republicans did not expect to carry a great many Southern States; therefore the split will not materially help them there. Then the main question is as to its effect in the North. It is not likely that the Southern ticket will make much of a show in the North. Massachusetts may do something in that line; but when the federal officers al turn out at elections in that State, it is called a large Democratic vote. They did not succeed in getting them all out when the question of making naturalized citizens aliens for some years, was up. In States where the Democratic party is not a limited corporation, not more Southern tickets will be balloted than will be wanted to frame.

The general anxiety of the Republicans that Douglas should not be nominated, would seem conclusive that they regarded him as the most formidable candidate in the North. Is he any less formidable because of the hostility of the South? When he entered the Illinois canvass against the Administration. he almost carried the Republican party with him. It is common now to abuse Horace Greeley and the Tribune for this, but, during the Lecompton contest, Douglas absorbed the enthusiasm of the Republican party. His contest with the South is now just as direct as that of the Republicans; it is better defined to the popular estimate, for it is at the bottom chiefly personal. He appeals to the same popular sympathies as the Republicans. The popular enthusiasm which the brief anti-Lecompton rebellion excited when Democratic orators added to their usual capital, bold denunciations of the Administration, of slavery, and of the arrogance slave-holders, may suggest what may be done in this canvass, when the Douglas Democracy can avail themselves of all these elements, and can appeal directly to the antislavery sentiment of the North. Republicans who suppose that the split in the Democratic party has given them an easy victory, will probably have cause for reflect tion before they arrive at it. The split will probably defeat Mr. Douglas's election by the people, but it at least makes him no less formidable to the Republicans; and it may be remembered that a change of a very small per cent. of the votes in one or two Northern ates will leave Mr. Lincoln standing among the breakers of an election in the House.

Some of the inhabitants of this city have been "taken in and done for" by a precious specimen of humanity, by the name of Allen. He made his appearance here about three months ago, assuming to be a lawyer from Ohio, and secured a quiet boarding place in the neighborhood of the prison. Sporting a wig with flowing ringlets, gold spectacles and cane, and making a great profession of plety, he succeeded in acquiring a spectacles and cane, and making a great pro-fession of piety, he succeeded in acquiring a social position in several Methodist families, and also an intimacy with one of the daugh-ters of a respectable citizen attached to the Methodist order. The resident clergyman of that church, having faith in his appearance and professions, took the stranger to his home, and treated him with the attention that his contract merits seemed to demand. and processions, took the stranger to his home, and treated him with the attention that his outward merits seemed to demand, and who, by this time claimed to be a preacher of the Gospel, and soon afterward did occupy the pulpit of the Methodist Church, also that of the Baptist Church, in the absence of the regular periors.

A few days ago his true character was made known under the following circumstances: He represented to the clergyman's family that his trunk had been broken open. and a check or draft for a large amount and some of his personal clothing had been taken therefrom, and he accused the young lady before mentioned of the theft, who, it ap-pears, was to and did not leave town on that day for Chicago. He then borrowed of the pears, was to and did not leave town on that day for Chicago. He then borrowed of the clergyman and his family about $15, and took a hasty leave, ostensibly in pursuit of his stolen property. This was nearly two weeks since, and he has not yet returned. We learn ie has written to his kind host that he was oing to St. Louis, and that the trunk which ie had left at his friend's house would probably make him good for six weeks' board and $15 borrowed money. On an examination of the trunk it was found to contain nothing of value, though there were several masks for the face, specificles and wigs of different kinds, a light horse-bridle, and a small sad-dle-pad with surcingle attached. It is con-clusive that the fellow is a scamp, and knows ow to play the imposter.

Infortunate Attempt at a Balloon Ascen-

Saturday's St. Louis Republican informs us:
There have been a number of balloon ascensions in different parts of the country, recently, made by "daring" and "intrepid" acronants, some of whom are ignorant of the very first principles of the art (or science) they profess. Such a que is "Mr. C. Thomas, from London"—who advertised to make an ascension yesterday from Lafayette-square.

The announcement, on three-sheet colored posters, that this celebrated aronaut would take an aerial trip and perform wonderful feats in the air, and also let an animal down with a parachute, drew a crowd of about five hundred persons to the place designated.

The balloon, a worully patched up, well ventilated little concern, called the Levisthan, was ready to start at seven o'clock, and a quarter or half an hour later the celebrated aeronaut from London, who, we learn, has been doing acrobatics at one of our secondrate places of amusements, made his appearance, tricked out in circus clothes.

At the word of command the ropes were let go, and the dilapidated old air-vessel staggered up into the atmosphere as though it was drunk. At the hight of about half a mile the intrepid voyager stuck one of his legs out of the car, and having accomplished this marvelous feat let off his parachute, to which a sick kitten was attached, which fell which a sick kitten was attached, which fell to the ground like a rock. The parachute having descended, its mammy, the balloon, proceeded to follow its example, and swaying off a distance of three quarters of a mile or so, it came to the earth.

Another Severe Storm in Iown House Blown Down, Trees Uprovted an Streets Inundated

Our city was visited by another severe storm yesterday forenoon, which blew down Mr. Beckwith's new building, on McDonaid's bill, west of town, and another new frame in process of erection on the west end of Market; and also another frame just ready to be covered in, on Msin-street, South Hamibal. The flag-staff on the Liberty-pole in the public square was snapped short off, and several locust and fruit trees uprocted on Market and Center-streets. The storm appears to have spent its greatest fury along Market and Center-streets. The storm appears to have spent its greatest fury along there, leveling several fences to the ground.
